
COURTLAND VILLAS
Thamesmead, SE28
A new development by
Lovell Farrow Construction

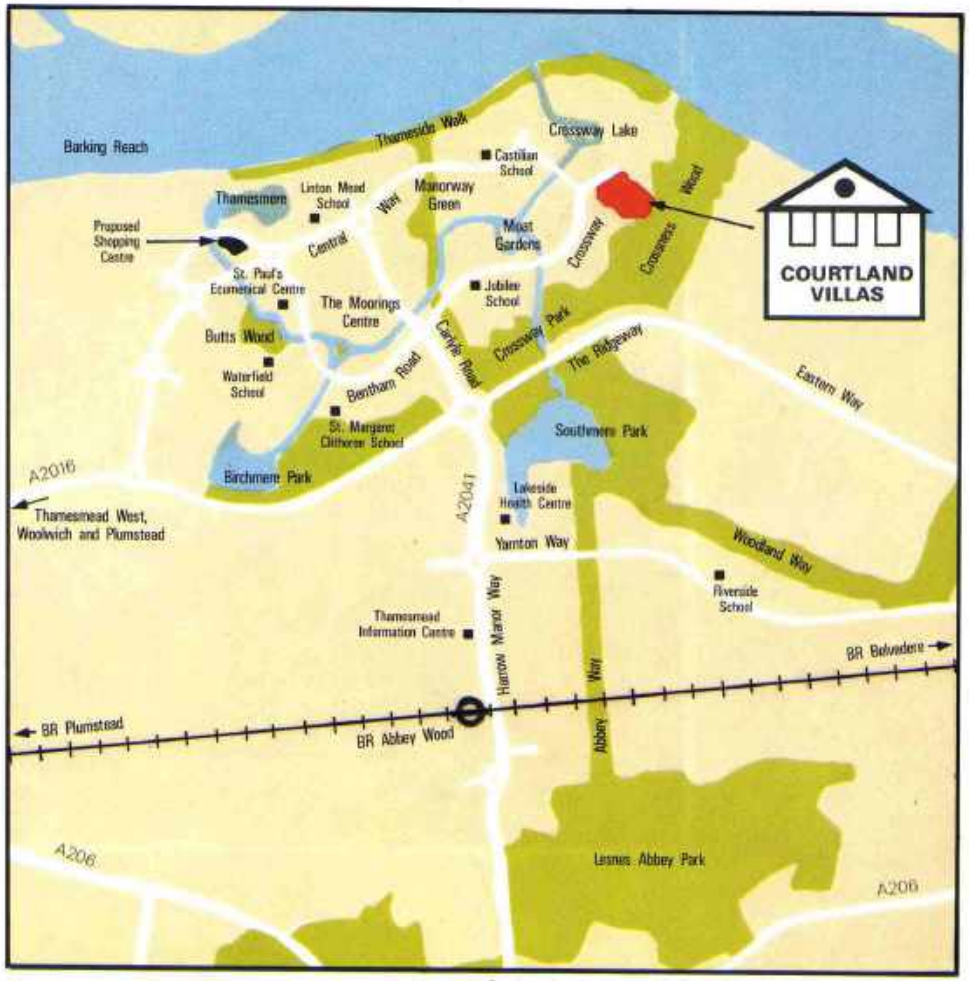

Lovell Farrow

For further details contact Lovell Farrow Construction Limited,
Marlow House, 616 Chiswick High Road, London W4 5RX.
Telephone: 01-747 3311

These particulars are believed correct but are supplied as background information only.
They are not intended to induce or form part of any contract.

NHBC
REGISTERED
HOUSE-BUILDER

Designed and printed in England. © Stocker Hocknell Ltd., Amersham

COURTLAND VILLAS, THAMESMEAD

Royal Laboratory, Woolwich Arsenal. Originally commissioned for a book, this illustration by an unknown artist is reproduced by courtesy of the National Maritime Museum, Greenwich.

The painting of Woolwich Arsenal, c1750, illustrates the manufacture of shells, for which the ultimate responsibility in those days rested with the 'Comptroller of Fireworks for Warr, Trymph and of all Firemasters, Fireworkers, Bombardiers and Petardiers'!

Peaceful reminders of this illustrious tradition are preserved in Thamesmead today. The long abandoned moated magazines form picturesque islands in an extensive network of canals. These, together with the Thamesmead lakes, offer a most attractive setting in which to live. Some of the islands have been designated as nature reserves. The lakes have become popular centres for angling and water sports.

Adjoining Courtland Villas is Crossness Wood, a newly created public open space. Residents also enjoy ready access to the footpaths and cycle ways which are as much a feature of Thamesmead as the excellent road system. Part of the three-mile river frontage is landscaped as a Thames-side walk.

Train and bus services are excellent. Thamesmead is within 10 miles of London and there are frequent trains to Charing Cross from Abbey Wood and Belvedere stations — less than a mile away — and Plumstead. Buses stop in Crossway for the British Rail stations and Woolwich, and also provide a link with the local shops and bus routes into London.

There are nine primary schools — shortly to be ten — and two established secondary schools, both with associated youth centres and evening classes for adults sharing the school facilities. The three community clubs each provide a focus for various leisure activities and also accommodate playgroups for the under-fives.

With its lakes, parks and open spaces, Thamesmead offers plenty of opportunity for sport and recreation, and with the proposed development of the central area, even more facilities are in prospect, including a major new shopping centre.

CROSSWAY
CROSSNESS WOOD
KEY TO COURTLAND VILLAS
1-bedroom flats
2-bedroom flats
4-bedroom house
3-bedroom house
2-bedroom house
1-bedroom house

Homes designed for modern living

With eight house types and two types of flat, all with gardens and private parking, Courtland Villas gives a superb choice. The attractive homes, grouped in secluded courts, are enhanced by sensitive landscaping. There is, in addition, extensive planting of trees and shrubs. Crossness Wood adjoins the development, offering immediate access to a public open space.

Designed by London architects Andrews Downie and Partners, Courtland Villas has classical individuality, while modern standards of construction ensure comfortable and economic living.

Main features

- Traditional cavity brickwork construction, with insulating blockwork for heat conservation.
- 100mm thick glass fibre loft insulation.
- Medallion Award electric heating for flats.
- Gas central heating with radiators optional for some houses.
- Stainless steel kitchen sinks, fitted cupboard units, wipe-clean worksurfaces in a range of colours and spaces for cooker and washing machine.
- Kitchen floors finished with coloured vinyl, other floors ready for carpeting.
- Coloured bathroom suites with bath, low-level WC, pedestal basin and matching ceramic wall tiles.
- Television and telephone points and ample points for power.
- Choice of room colours.
- Front gardens grassed and planted with shrubs or trees.
- Parking spaces or car ports.
- Houses are sold freehold, flats on 125-year leases.
- NHBC Ten Year Protection.

The developers of Courtland Villas are Lovell Farrow, part of the Lovell Group which was established in Buckinghamshire nearly two hundred years ago and has gained a reputation in house building for quality and value for money.

Our show houses and sales centre are open every day at the site and our representative will be pleased to answer all your questions.

Lovell Farrow

Designed and printed in England. © Stocker Hocknell Ltd., Amersham