Happy Birthday Thamesmead

It was 50 years ago, on the 3rd July 1968, that the Gooch family took their place in local history as the first ever residents of Thamesmead, marking the beginning of London's New Town. Since then, Thamesmead has grown and changed over the decades welcoming new communities from all over the world.

Join us for this very special birthday party as we celebrate everything about Thamesmead and it's fascinating past, as well as look forward to its exciting future. The day will kick-off with an extraordinary community carnival winding its way through the streets of north Thamesmead before it arrives in Southmere at 1pm with a grand entrance.

The Park Stage will entertain you all afternoon with the best of Thamesmead's local talent, and a thriving community food and craft market will feed you down at Southmere Square, accompanied with some great acoustic sounds and a tea dance for all.

There's lots more to entertain you from dinghy races on the lake, to an intergalactic time traveller, circus workshops, and creative and sporting activities for the little ones.

The festival has been brought to you by a dedicated steering group of local residents from across Thamesmead who have worked with local arts organisation Emergency Exit Arts to bring you this great day out. Huge thanks to: Joanne Bernard, Chris and Cat Molnar, Pastor Bunmi Omidiran, Siobhan Sherlock, Jane Tudor, Ian Tyson, Raymond Uwkwenya and Ray Woodage.

The festival has also been supported with funding from Arts Council England nd the Heritage Lottery Fund, and has been organised and funded by the Thamesmead Culture team at Peabody.

We hope you have a fantastic afternoon and here's to the next 50 years!
